

Should I save these articles about Heart Disease in the dietary factors folder or the heart risk factors?

You want to discuss my article? That's great, let me just find the final version, I know it's somewhere on my computer.

Manually reformatting all my citations almost makes me regret submitting this paper to another journal.

Where did I save that file my colleague sent me?

If these situations sound familiar, RefWorks is the solution!

As your career or research progresses, access to your carefully curated resource collection becomes increasingly important. RefWorks is an easy-to-use reference management service that simplifies your research workflow, from data collection, organization, and collaboration to paper writing and publishing. Your lifetime of research is secure and available at your fingertips whether you are at the office, working from home, are on the road, or at an event.

- Cloud-based solution
  - Access your materials from any location with internet
  - Single platform: no device or app syncing
- Save time: Find, access, and capture research materials from virtually any source
- Manage all data in multiple formats – PDF, PowerPoint, Word, Excel, HTML etc. No storage limit
- Store in one central workplace, in as many folders and Projects as desired; use tags to further group and locate materials
- Access over four billion records from Ex Libris discovery services for rich reference metadata
- Rely on our world-class dedicated support team available to help resolve any issue, also via chat
- Share folders and/or Projects with peers
- Collaborate on group projects and edit as a team, online and in real time
- Read, annotate and highlight full-text pdfs, also in shared folders
- Integrate with today's top writing tools – Microsoft Word and Google Docs, using RefWorks add-ons
- Generate authoritative and professional bibliographies and citations from thousands of available citation styles
- Reformat an entire paper with one click

Maximize Research Productivity

about.proquest.com/go/refworks

RefWorks